AVYVE Completes Georgia Pacific's Client Innovation Exchange

Atlanta, GA – September, 2006 - AVYVE, a leading audio visual systems integration company headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia, recently announced the completion of Georgia Pacific's Client Innovation Exchange. Georgia Pacific's Information Technology group needed a space where they could host meetings and demonstrate technologies to groups of people who could improve the efficiency of their operations by adopting some of the same technologies.

The Client Innovation Exchange (CIX) features a space that showcases Georgia Pacific's technologies in three primary areas: supply chain, mobility, and manufacturing. The space allows them to promote these technologies to their clients and business partners by effectively communicating complex concepts in a visual manner. The CIX can be configured to create a variety of presentation content to a particular audience. There are several 37" LCD monitors and wall mounted touch panels that control the functionality of the audio visual components and lighting.

The success of this project relied upon the close coordination between the project team which consisted of design architects, content developers, department heads, the Information Technology group, the audio visual integration designer, and the general contractor.
